Kintsugi is a centuries-old Japanese art form that involves repairing broken pottery by joining the shattered pieces with lacquer and precious metals. The cracks are highlighted with gold, making the repaired object more unique and valuable than the original.

and has a history, it becomes more beautiful. It shows that "scars" are not something to be hidden with shame, but are to be displayed with pride.

Kintsugi: We are stronger and more beautiful in the broken places.

Last month at BLOOM, each of us created our own Kintsugi piece: taking turns breaking our pottery, mending it back together, and highlighting the cracks with gold paint.

Each piece of pottery is a reminder of our journey through loss and grief. Kintsugi teaches us that even when something is broken beyond repair, it can still be transformed into something beautiful. The loss of a child leaves an irreplaceable void, but it also leaves us with a profound depth of love and a new way of seeing the world. We are Kintsugi.

Nonprofit Capstone Project

This past month, a student attending Rockhurst University reached out to Emilia's Wings hoping to partner with us for her Communications Capstone project.

"Hi, my name is Emily Deister and I am a junior at Rockhurst University, I am studying Strategic Communications and minoring in marketing. I currently work for KidsZone which is the before and after school program for Liberty Public Schools.

For our capstone project, I wanted to partner with your non profit because of your mission and drive to help families in need. I think it's such a beautiful mission and honestly there are not many non profits like this in Kansas City. I think your non profit lines up with my capstone project, because we were tasked to choose a non profit that we felt truly did their part in society and asked the question "how can we make a difference?" And I truly believe your small but mighty non profit does just that.

The information that I gather from interviews would be used to document how I think your organization utilizes communication theories that I have learned about, and see if I can offer any new communication theories that could be implemented."

I will be meeting in person with Emily for an in-person interview to help her with her capstone project and see this as a great opportunity to shed light on Pregnancy and Infant Loss. Emily has also expressed interest in interviewing others who have attended our BLOOM support group meetings, if they are open to being interviewed. Interviews do not have to be in person, unless you would prefer that option. To contact Emily, she can be reached by text or email at: (816) 813-7964 or emdeist@gmail.com.

Unveiling Hope: A Packing Party with a Purpose

Lullaby of Hope Headquarters

Independence, MO 64055

Tentatively planned for Saturday April 5th

https://lullabyofhope.org/

In the quiet corners of grief, there exists a poignant camaraderie among those who have endured loss. For many women, the journey through miscarriage, stillbirth, or loss in the womb can be isolating and immensely painful. Yet, amidst this pain, there is a glimmer of light—a community known as Lullaby of Hope, dedicated to weaving threads of comfort and support through thoughtful gestures.

Lend your hands and hearts to assemble these precious gift boxes, each a testament to the power of community and compassion. Together, we can turn moments of sorrow into opportunities for healing and hope. Together, we can transform a packing party into an ultimate act of love and solidarity.

The agenda is simple yet powerful: assemble hundreds of Wonderfully Made Gift Boxes, each tailored with love and empathy. These boxes are more than mere packages; they are tokens of solidarity, carefully crafted to speak volumes of compassion to women traversing the depths of loss.

A small group of BLOOM members came together for a day of giving back to the loss community last September. It was such a wonderful experience for these ladies, that we want to do it again! Please join us in given back to a cause that is near to each of us. Not only will we being giving back to our own bereaved community, we will all get the opportunity to deepen our relationships together outside our normal meeting hours.

Please reach out to Samantha Gabriel with any questions or if you plan to attend that afternoon. Our group plans are to meet for lunch at a nearby restaurant. We are in the early stages of planning. Lunch may happen before or after heading over to Lullaby of Hope to pack the boxes. We will communicate more information once we have a better idea of what our plans are. We would love to have as many people who are able to join us for this fun community give back event!

We extend our most sincere sympathy to those who have recently lost a child.

Please know that we are thinking of you and share in your hurt and sorrow

A Bereaved Parent's Battle Cry by Anna Nalepka

This is a bereaved parent's battle cry.

I'm tired... tired of having to hide how I am truly feeling from the rest of the world. Tired of having to put on a fake smile every time I go to work or a social event, so people around me will think I'm doing better. Tired of wanting to post something about MY CHILD - yet I don't because people are "tired of seeing that."

So I hide. I hide and post in one of my bereaved parent groups because that is the only place "I feel safe enough to show my real feelings and won't be judged."

Why the hell should I have to hide my feelings about my child?! Do others have to hide their feelings about their children? Do other parents have to watch "how many times" they post about their son or their daughter's soccer games or recitals or first steps or proms or births - or anything that they rejoice in?

No - you know why? Because other people will rejoice with them! They are not looking for pats on the back because they are that child's parent. They are proud of their children. PERIOD!

So why... WHY IS IT DIFFERENT FOR BEREAVED PARENTS?

We don't have future proms... or recitals... or births... or first steps. We have memories. That.is.it!

We post about our children because... we are proud of them just like any other parent.

We want people to support our memories with the same encouragement with which they used to support our accomplishments and milestones when our children still lived!

Say our child's name! Share a memory to our page of that child! Rejoice with us!

And on those hard days when we post that we miss our child, and we say we can't go on, whether it is two months or 10 years later - please understand, we are not looking for a pat on the back or sympathy. We want you to remember that child with us!

Please... Memories are all we have left...
